

PASS-THE-BALL RELAY

Take a dry-land party game and give it a dunk in the pool

Two teams each form a line. At "Go," the player at the front of each line passes a ball over his head to the player behind him, who then passes it between his legs to the person behind him, who then passes it over his head, and so on. When it reaches the last player, he swims the ball to the front of the line (either through the legs of his teammates or next to them) and starts the relay again. The first line of players to return to their original order wins.
